Some people think that we should invent a new language for international communication. Do the benefits of this outweigh the problems?

只来得及写一段，老师请息怒。。。。

In a globalized world, many people today have to acquire a foreign language, such as English. They can communicate with foreigners in some business cooperations or studying abroad so it not necessary to invent a new language.

People from different countries can use a new language. It will be more convenient for people to communicate and share experiences.

They have their own mother tongue so it is difficult for people to understand each other. if people can not facilitate a international language. For example, it will be more efficient for people to exchange ideas and solve problems together in some international conferences. And in another case, For some employees working in multinational companies, they can share information and communicate without language problem so they can work efficiently and make more profits.
