We'll also be going into the farm that's part of the estate, where there's plenty to do. Most of the buildings date from the eighteenth century, so you can really step back into an agricultural past.

Until recently, the dairy was where milk from the cows was turned into cheese. It's now the place to go for lunch, or afternoon tea, or just a cup of coffee and a slice of homemade cake.

Q15

The big stone building that dominates the farm is the large barn, and in here is our collection of agricultural tools. These were used in the past to plough the earth, sow seeds, make gates, and much more.

Q16

There's a small barn, also made of stone, where you can groom the donkeys and horses, to keep their coats clean. They really seem to enjoy having it done, and children love grooming them.

The horses no longer live in the stables, which instead is the place to go to buy gifts, books, our own jams and pickles, and clothes and blankets made of wool from our sheep.

Q18

Outside the shed, which is the only brick building, you can climb into a horse-drawn carriage for a lovely, relaxing tour of the park and farm. The carriages are well over a hundred years old.

Q19

And finally, the parkland, which was laid out in the eighteenth century, with a lake and trees that are now well established. You'll see types of cattle and sheep that are hardly ever found on farms these days. We're helping to preserve them, to stop their numbers falling further.

Q20

OK, well if you'd like to come with me ...

JAMES: No, I haven't. There's so much that seems interesting – Viking settlement in other countries, trade, mythology...

BETH: Well, what I suggest is that you read an assignment a student wrote last year, which is kept in the library. It's short and well focused, and I'm sure you'll find it helpful. I'll give you the details in a moment. Textbooks usually cover so many topics, it can be very difficult to choose just one. Q26

JAMES: OK. I've got a DVD of the film about the Vikings that came out earlier this year. Should I watch that again?

BETH: If it's the one I am thinking of, hmm, I'd ignore it – it's more fantasy than reality. But I've got a recording of a documentary that you should watch. It makes some interesting and provocative points, which I think will help you to focus your topic. Q27

JAMES: Right.

JAMES: So then should I work out an outline? Q28

BETH: Yes. Just headings for different sections, at this stage. And then you should start looking for suitable articles and books to draw on, and take notes which you organise according to those headings. Q29

JAMES: I see.

BETH: Then put short phrases and sentences as bullet points under each heading. Make sure that this skeleton makes sense and flows properly, before writing up the paper in full. Q30

JAMES: OK. Thanks, that's very helpful.

ED: So what about The Emporium Theatre's production of the play?
 GEMMA: I thought some things worked really well but there were some problems too.
 ED: Yeah. What about the set, for example?
 GEMMA: I think it was visually really stunning. I'd say that was probably the most memorable thing about this production.
 ED: You're right. The set design was really amazing, but actually I have seen similar ideas used in other productions.
 GEMMA: What about the lighting? Some of the scenes were so dimly lit it was quite hard to see.
 ED: I didn't dislike it. It helped to change the mood of the quieter scenes.
 GEMMA: That's a good point.
 ED: What did you think of the costumes?
 GEMMA: I was a bit surprised by the contemporary dress. I must say.
 ED: Yeah – I think it worked well, but I had assumed it would be more conventional.
 GEMMA: Me too. I liked the music at the beginning and I thought the musicians were brilliant, but I thought they were wasted because the music didn't have much impact in Acts 2 and 3.
 ED: Yes – that was a shame.
 GEMMA: One problem with this production was that the actors didn't deliver the lines that well. They were speaking too fast.
 ED: It was a problem I agree, but I thought it was because they weren't speaking loudly enough – especially at key points in the play.
 GEMMA: I actually didn't have a problem with that.
