Well, last year, I met an international student at a cultural event¹ organized by our school. Our college invited foreign students to chat about cultural differences and popular topics in China.

I was one of the organizers of the event. So I got to know some young people from many countries with completely different cultures. One memorable² person was a Nigerian³ from a rich family. But he's very humble and hilarious.

After the event, we shared a table for lunch. So I got to know him better. He told me a lot about his country. For example, in Nigeria, it's considered disrespectful⁴ to pass something with the left hand. He also talked about visiting a Chinese friend's home for the first time. He said he was served a mug of hot water. Drinking hot water instead of coffee or cold water was confusing to him. He thought his friend was poor. But later he learned that drinking hot water is normal in China.

I laughed out loud⁵ hearing his story. It was so funny from a Chinese perspective. Actually it's just a difference between our cultures. Anyway, we only met once. But I really liked talking to him. Getting to know him helped me learn more about the world.
