1.introduction (背景+改写题目+个人立场)

The environmental pollution is a thorny issue that confronts many countries all over the world. The issue about whether only governments and private companies have the capability to solve the problem remains controversial. In my view , while governments must no doubt create eco-friendly policy and do their part to bring about change, we, as individuals, have a crucial role to play as well.

个人立场论点一： In any ecosystem, all the parts are connected. The food we eat, the type of transport we choose, the way we consume and how much we consume as individuals all have a direct impact on the environment. Our individual habits might seem insignificant from our perspective, but at the macro level they add up in a big way. ←

个人立场论点二： In addition, while seemingly powerless, individuals can actually do a lot to make a difference. We can drive hybrid cars, conserve on electricity and water, buy local organic food and support environmentally-friendly brands. These are sustainable practices that can create a ripple effect.←

反方立场论点： However, this is not to say that governments should not also carry their weight. By encouraging 'green' business and creating incentives for good resource management and responsible consumption, they can help lead the way. Consider, for example, how US President Obama's words and plans about a 'green economy' have led to signs of renewed economic optimism in America. Governments can set the tone for change and do a lot to harness individual good will and momentum. But they also need individual support and appreciation to combat environmental problems. ←

To conclude, while governments and private companies have the responsibility, I still harbor the view that each individual should get involved in dealing with the problem. In the long run, the protection of our environment can positively contribute to social sustainability.

To conclude, while spending longer on watching TV affects children's behavior to some extent, I still harbor the view that the content they are exposed to influence them more. If parents can choose suitable programs, the young will not be negatively affected.
