2021-1-16 雅思写作考题: In many countries students who leave high school have no understanding of how to manage their money. What do you think are the reasons? What can be done to teach them how to manage personal finance?

It is common that many high school graduates do not know how to manage their money and in this essay I will analyze some possible reasons and offer my suggestions on how to solve this problem.

As a result of improved living standards, most families have become wealthier than before, making it possible for them to provide children with better material lives. Born and growing up in an affluent society and better-off families, teenagers tend to take everything for granted and spend money without consideration. Most of them focus on academic learning and extra-curricular activities in their daily lives, and education relevant to money management is missing both at home and school.

Teaching children how to manage money is an important task, which requires the concerted effort of both parents and school. The first step is perhaps for parents to buy a piggy bank for small children and open a bank account for teens. Parents should make children realize the value of money and understand that money is not an unlimited resource. Children need to learn to keep track of their consumption and make a budget as early as possible.

Introducing some finance-related courses to high school is probably a good way to teach teenagers practical skills in managing their money. Some tips can be taught to students about how to spend money and save money wisely, such as comparing prices on the web before shopping and exchanging unused items with their friends. If high school could incorporate money management into the curriculum, young people would be more capable of managing their money after they leave school.

2021-1-30 雅思写作考题: More and more plastic is polluting the city, countryside and ocean. What are the problems caused by plastic waste? What measures should be taken to solve these problems?

Plastic is widely used in people's daily lives for carry bags, drinking bottles and all kinds of packaging. However, this kind of material, though affordable and durable, is causing serious problems to the environment.

Plastic is a major source of pollution to the urban and rural environment and because of its stable nature, not easy to decompose, the impact of plastic can last hundreds of years. As is known to all, the manufacturing process of plastic products involves raw materials and additives that contain toxic chemicals. If not disposed of properly, plastics will release these chemicals to the surrounding environment and degrade the quality of water and soil.

Plastic pollution also brings about disastrous consequences to the ocean. Every year, tons of plastic bags, bottles and fishing gear are dumped into the ocean by coast city residents and fishermen. After the plastic has broken down into smaller pieces, they can be eaten by fishes, leading to death of fishes and causing hazard to those who rely on marine life for food, including people.

The issue of plastic pollution is so severe that measures need to be taken to tackle it. Cutting down the amount of plastic use is an effective way to reduce the plastic waste, which requires the effort of both businesses and individuals. People should be encouraged to carry reusable bags for shopping and bring their own coffee mugs to a café. Shops, restaurants and businesses should use non-plastic materials for packaging and containers as possible as they can. If alternative materials could be developed and promoted, the pollution caused by plastic waste would be dramatically reduced.

2021-2-20 雅思写作考题: Parents should encourage children to spend less time on studying and more time on doing physical activities. To what extent do you agree or disagree?

Some people believe that parents should encourage children to do more physical exercise, even though this possibly means less time spent on children's study. Considering the declining health of many students, I agree with this opinion.

Undoubtedly, children should participate in more sports activities to improve their physical health. Lack of exercise is causing a series of health problems to children. Spending too much time on sedentary activities such as reading books and watching electronic devices leads to weight gain and nearsightedness. Not getting enough exercise also affects the normal growth of children's bones and muscles. Only by encouraging children to take part in sports activities can these problems be avoided. This will occupy some time that can otherwise be spent on children's study, but the benefits of exercise are obvious. Good health can guarantee that students have sufficient energy for their study and will not be absent for class on sick leave.

In addition, doing physical exercise is an effective way to relieve emotional stress that arises from continuous study. Many children are experiencing anxiety because of busy schedules in school and loads of assignments. If they could take a break by playing basketball or running a few laps in their spare time, they would reduce the anxiety and release their negative emotions. In the process of doing exercise, their bodies can produce some chemical substances that make them happy and relaxed. When they return to study, a higher efficiency can be achieved.

Overall, doing physical activities is important to children's health and if arranged properly, it can also facilitate children's study.

2021-3-6 雅思写作考题: In some countries around the world men and women tend to have babies later in life. Why does this happen? What are the effects on society and family life?

In many countries, people tend to have babies at an older age, compared with the generations of their parents and grandparents. I believe the changing social environment is responsible for this phenomenon.

As more women receive higher education and enter the workforce, they marry and start having babies later in life. In the past, females got married and gave birth to children in their early 20s, but now they are studying for degrees on campus or working for a living in the office. Another reason for late childbirth is perhaps the rising cost of raising a child. The arrival of a new baby will undoubtedly increase the family's spending and put more pressure on young couples. Therefore, they constantly postpone their plans of having a child until they think they are financially prepared.

The delay in childbirth can give young women more time to pursue a degree and a career. It is also good for the children who can be raised in a relatively better environment. Older parents are thought to be more responsible and better off to support the family. However, as the age of pregnancy increases, a woman's fertility begins to decrease and the risk of delivering babies goes up. These factors need to be considered by young couples. For society, late childbirth means a lower birth rate because women have fewer fertile years, so the country's young population declines. Consequently, the percentage of aged population may rise accordingly, leading to a series of social problems such as the lack of manpower and the need for better healthcare facilities.

To sum up, when to have babies is a personal choice and the trend of having babies late in life brings both positive and negative outcomes to society and individuals.

2021-3-20 雅思写作考题: Some people believe that if the police force carries guns, it will encourage higher levels of violence in society. To what extent do you agree or disagree?

In some parts of the world, policemen can carry guns on duty, but in some other areas, the police are routinely unarmed. In my opinion, carrying guns seems to be a reasonable arrangement, but sometimes it increases the numbers of violent crimes.

Armed police can have a greater deterrent effect on potential criminals and thus increase community safety. Those who intend to commit crimes may give up their evil intentions, knowing that armed policemen are patrolling on the street. Also, in case of emergency, guns give the police an advantage in fighting against criminals and enable policemen to better defend themselves and protect the general public. An example is that in some areas where drug trafficking is rampant, policemen need to carry guns and get ready for possible fights at all times.

However, the police armed with guns may lead to higher levels of violence in some cases. My concerns lie in the abuse of weapons and the loopholes of gun control. In some cities where policemen are encouraged to use guns on duty, there are many news reports about innocent people being shot by the police mistakenly. Some injuries and deaths could have been avoided if the police had not fired impulsively in the action. Besides, managing the large number of guns could be a thorny problem and the loss of guns could pose a threat to public security.

Overall, it is difficult to judge whether it is right or wrong for policemen to carry guns in their routine tasks. This depends on the specific situation of a city or a country. The important thing is to take comprehensive measures to improve public security and arming the police is just an option when necessary.

2021-4-3 雅思写作考题: More and more people no longer read newspaper or watch TV programs to get news. They get news about the world through the internet. Is this a positive or negative development?

People used to read newspapers and watch TV to know current affairs, but now the Internet has become an important source of news. I think there are multiple benefits of being online readers over offline readers.

Firstly, online news sourcing has greater advantages in terms of the timeliness of the coverage. Those who witness a news event can post the information online the first time and readers have easy access to the news on their mobile phones. In comparison, it takes a longer time to get the news via the newspaper and TV, as reporters need to be dispatched to the site and too much time is spent on writing, printing, circulation and program production.

In addition to getting the news in a timely manner, web users can also join the discussion over the news event. After the news is posted, readers can follow the post with their comments. The internet gives readers more opportunities to express their opinions and share their ideas, while in the traditional forms of media the readers have much less degree of participation and interaction.

However, the truthfulness of the online news is a concern of the general public. Unlike newspapers and TV, the Internet does not have rigorous censorship. The result is that, in some cases, the news turns out to be fake after it is disseminated widely on the web. But this situation is improving, with effective measures taken to combat spreading rumors on the Internet.

Overall, it is a positive development that people choose to get news on the Internet and this trend is expected to continue in the future.

2021-4-17 雅思写作考题: Young people do not spend their holidays and weekends doing outdoor activities like hiking and climbing in the natural environment. Why is that? How do we encourage them to go out?

Outdoor activities such as hiking and climbing are definitely beneficial to people's health, but these activities seem to be unpopular among young people. There are some reasons that may explain this phenomenon.

A common excuse is that young people are so busy that they have no time to go out, which may be true to some extent. But the more important reason for less outdoor exercise is that the young generation today prefers to engage in other relaxing and entertaining activities such as watching TV series, playing video games or socializing online. Compared with outdoor activities that require more time, energy and skills, these indoor activities are more accessible and appealing to the youth.

To get young people outdoors, the first step is to educate them about the rewards of outdoor activities, which can make them physically stronger and boost their mental health as well. The community needs to play a role in this education and effective ways include putting up posters on the bulletin board, or uploading some videos on the web to publicize the benefits of outdoor exercise. Only when young people become self-motivated to go out can outdoor activities truly be promoted.

If the community could organize some clubs with outdoor themes like hiking, camping and boating, it would attract more young people to these activities. Coaching should be provided in the club to teach participants essential skills and going out in groups would make the outdoor experience safer and more fun. Once young people feel the joy of outdoor activities, they would go out more often and spend their leisure time more actively.

2021-5-8 雅思写作考题: Some people think that the best way to improve road transport safety is to make vehicle drivers have the test every year. To what extent do you agree or disagree?

Once a person passes the driving test and gets his license, he becomes a qualified driver permanently unless the license is revoked due to serious offence. To improve road safety, some people suggest that drivers should have the test every year to renew his license, but I doubt the necessity and feasibility of this proposal.

Taking a test on a yearly basis seems to be able to regulate drivers' behavior, urging them to review traffic laws and driving skills continuously. However, this measure can hardly prevent sophisticated drivers from causing troubles on the road. They may obey the rules perfectly with the examiner sitting beside, while after the test they are reckless and in disregard of traffic laws. What these drivers need is strict monitoring, so installing more surveillance cameras and giving violators severe punishment are more effective than making drivers take the test every year.

Another reason against repeated test is that organizing the driving test is a task that consumes manpower and material resources and is hard to be fulfilled in real life. If this labor and money could be allocated to other aspects, better results would be achieved. For instance, a large number of accidents are attributed to broken traffic lights, unclear signs or poorly maintained roads. Therefore, investing the fund on road maintenance is a better way to make the road safer.

In conclusion, to reduce the number of traffic offences, multiple measures are needed to be taken. However, I think giving yearly test to licensed drivers is not a workable solution, with little effect on improving road safety.

2021-5-22 雅思写作考题: Many museums and historical sites are mainly visited by tourists and not local people. Why is the case? What can be done to attract local people?

It is common for tourists to visit museums and historical sites when they travel to a city, but an interesting phenomenon is that few of the visitors to these places are local people. There are some reasons that may explain this.

One main purpose of travelling is to explore new places and visiting museums and historical sites is an easy way to achieve this purpose. It gives tourists a large amount of information about the history and culture of the new place they visit. By contrast, local people seem to be less interested in museums and historical spots, perhaps because they think they already know too much about their city, or they are too busy to pay a visit. In their spare time, they would rather go to the cinema or the park, which is more relaxing than visiting a museum.

To attract more local people to museums and historical sites, an important measure is to make the tour to these places more appealing. For example, museums should hold exhibitions of different themes regularly, with interactive activities incorporated. These events need to be publicized in newspapers and on TV to make local residents informed. In addition, most of local visitors to museums and historical sites are students, and they can persuade their parents to join them. If students were given some assignments about doing research on local history, their parents would be motivated to go to the museum with them at weekends.

In conclusion, it is understandable that museums and historical sites are attractive to tourists from the outside, but meanwhile we should take some measures to make these tourist attractions more appealing to local people.

2021-6-5 雅思写作考题: The family has a great influence on children's development, but the influence from outside the home plays a bigger part in children's life. To what extent do you agree or disagree?

Every child is influenced by multiple factors in his or her growth. Compared with the family, other factors from outside the home seem to have greater influence on children's development.

Parents are considered as children's first teachers, playing an indispensable role in children's growth, particularly in their childhood years. Parents are the first to help children to learn basic life skills and the ability to distinguish right from wrong. Children tend to imitate what their parents do and follow how their parents behave. If parents could set a good example, children would be more likely to become valuable members of society. By contrast, the wrong methods of parenting can be harmful to children's growth.

However, after children enter school, other factors have greater influence on their development than parents do. First and foremost, teachers in school impart children knowledge of various subjects in a systematic manner so that children can make progress in academics and prepare for future careers. Teachers are also expected to be students' role models, guiding them in behavior and correcting their mistakes. In addition, school is a wider community where children spend most of time living and studying together with their peers from different backgrounds. This experience is important in children's growth, which teaches them how to interact positively with others, to settle a dispute and to contribute to the community.

In conclusion, parenting approaches affect children's abilities, values and behavior, especially during pre-school years. After children start school, this influence still exists but other factors from the outside play a larger role in children's development.

2021-6-12 雅思写作考题: Some people believe that university education should focus on the skills of employment for the future. Others think they should focus on academic study only. Discuss both views and give your own opinion.

People have different opinions about the aim of the university: whether the university should focus on employment skills or academic study. In this essay, I will discuss this issue from both sides.

Some people emphasize employment skills and believe these are what students most need in today's society. Earning a living is the realistic task students have to face after they leave campus, so preparing them for employment should be the priority of the university. The best way is to teach students practical skills that can be applied to real jobs and meet employers' demand. The fierce competition in the job market calls for the university to take action; otherwise students may face unemployment after graduation.

However, some people argue that the university should concentrate on academic study. One of the main functions of the university is to cultivate elites in the areas of politics, economy, science, etc. through its academic curriculum. The employment-oriented education jeopardizes this function, equating the university to the vocational school. Also, from the perspective of students' personal development, academic study enables them to lay a solid foundation for their future careers, no matter what jobs they will do. Those who have a good command of practical skills usually end up doing operational work, while graduates with strong academic background can achieve greater success in their careers.

In my opinion, the university should persist in its aim for improving the academic standard, which is beneficial to the university and students as well. Focusing on employment skills is a shortsighted view and graduates with high academic levels can also excel in their jobs.

2021-7-10 雅思写作考题: Education of young people is highly prioritized in many countries. However, educating adults who cannot write or read is even more important and governments should spend more money on this. To what extent do you agree or disagree?

In most countries, a certain portion of adults are illiterate, which means they do not have the basic ability to read or write. However, education for them is quite limited and governments tend to give priority to the education of children and young people. In my opinion, educating adults and reducing the illiteracy rate should also be emphasized.

Firstly, learning to read and write can improve adults' well-being and make their lives more convenient. Some illiterate people struggle to live a normal life as they may have difficulty in reading the menu and bus schedule. For some reasons, they do not receive proper education at a young age and later on they are paying a price for this. If the government could provide some education programs for this group of citizens, life would be much easier for them.

Moreover, raising the literacy rate can increase people's employability and produce more qualified workers for society. Most of people with low literacy rely on the government's welfare or do some low-paid work. Education will enhance their competitiveness in the job market, making them competent in challenging jobs with higher pay. This is also beneficial to social progress, as educated people can make greater contribution to society with their knowledge and skills.

Unfortunately, adults' education does not receive as much attention as children's education in many parts of the world. This is mainly because the issue of adult illiteracy is often ignored by the government and public. The purpose of school education is to give young people a bright prospect and make them better serve society, and for those adults whose schooling is not complete, the government should offer them equal support.

2021-7-24 雅思写作考题: Some people think that in this modern world people are getting dependent on each other, while others think that people are becoming more independent. Discuss both views and give your own opinion.

It is said that we are now living in an increasingly interdependent world, but on the other hand, more and more people appear to be independent in their lives.

Obviously, labor division is becoming highly advanced in the modern world, with everyone specializing in a certain field. It is impossible for a person to produce all necessities in his life by himself and he has to buy goods in the market, which means he needs to depend on the work of other people. In addition, cooperation has become a key element in our daily work. When a company consists of dozens of departments and a project becomes huge and complicated, it is hard to imagine that one person can finish his task without cooperating with his colleagues.

On the other hand, it is interesting to note that people today have a strong awareness of independence, which is particularly shown in their private lives. For example, many young people are reluctant to live with their parents, as they did in traditional extended families. Instead, they establish small families and some choose to live alone. Another example is that, in this network age, increasingly numbers of people become solitary, with less face-to-face communication in life. They can get answers to almost all questions by searching on the web, or get things done with the help of various Apps, not relying on neighbors and friends any more. So, in a sense, the advent of the Internet has contributed to their independent lifestyles.

Overall, I am of the opinion that individuals cannot live without communication and cooperation with others. As the economy develops, our work and lives are closely linked with others' contribution to society. But it is also true that people have more independence in their personal choices.

2021-8-7 雅思写作考题: Some people think children have the freedom to make mistakes, while other people believe that adults should prevent children from making mistakes. Discuss both views and give your own opinion.

Some people think that children should be allowed to make and learn from mistakes, while other people believe that adults' intervention is needed to prevent these mistakes.

According to some people, mistakes are unavoidable and learning from the mistake is a valuable experience in life. After making mistakes, children can learn to reflect on their actions and remedy the situations. In this process, they develop important characteristics such as independence and resilience. By contrast, if children always live under the protection of parents, they are deprived of the opportunity to learn and grow. Once confronted with setbacks and failures in their adulthood, they become disheartened without the right attitude and strategy to handle these.

However, some people argue that learning from mistakes is not necessary and mistakes should be avoided with parental guidance in place. Every time children make mistakes they are paying a price for that, and some prices are too high to afford. As the guardian of children, parents have the responsibility to prevent children from making such mistakes. For some children who intend to play truant or imitate dangerous behavior, parents should stop them and make them realize the consequence, rather than letting them learn from mistakes on their own.

In my point of view, it is unlikely that individuals can make no errors throughout their lives; therefore, allowing children to learn from mistakes and recover from setbacks is beneficial to their growth. Of course, the severity and frequency of the mistakes need to be supervised. A certain degree of guidance from adults is necessary, but overprotection should not be encouraged.

Traditional cars need to be operated by drivers, but with the emergence of driverless cars it is said that in the future all vehicles on the road will be controlled by self-driving system. I believe this will benefit individuals and society as a whole.

First of all, driverless technology can significantly reduce the number of car crashes. It is reported that the main causes for road accidents are human errors such as speeding, drunk driving, distraction, etc. If human drivers were replaced by the automatic system, these factors would not cause accidents anymore. We would expect much safer roads, saving numerous lives and avoiding enormous economic loss every year.

Another benefit of using driverless vehicles is that it makes travelling more efficient and saves people's time. On the way between home and the company, commuters can plan for their work or take a rest instead of concentrating on the road. They are less likely to get stuck in traffic congestion, as vehicles connected with the central control system can optimize the route based on the data about road conditions.

However, there are possible problems that may come along with the popularization of autonomous cars. Some people enjoy driving on their own, but artificial intelligence would deprive of their pleasure of driving cars. For those who rely on driving to earn a living, the consequence is more serious. Millions of bus, truck and taxi drivers would be laid off, leading to an high unemployment rate.

In conclusion, although driverless vehicles may be unfriendly to driving lovers and professional drivers, they will bring substantial benefits to people and society.

2021-9-18 雅思写作考题: Some experts suppose that when a country is already rich, any additional increase in economic wealth does not make its citizens happier. To what extent do you agree or disagree?

Many nations around the world give priority to economic development and some rich countries also strive for more wealth. In my opinion, whether the additional wealth is a blessing or a curse to citizens depends on how the wealth is made and distributed.

More wealth can further raise people's living standard by providing them with various kinds of high-quality products including daily necessities and even luxuries. Economic prosperity also brings more tax revenues to the government, which has a greater budget to build and maintain better infrastructure including education, healthcare, transportation, etc. All these will increase people's degree of satisfaction with life.

However, in some cases, the rapid economic growth is achieved at the expense of the clean environment and people suffer rather than benefit from this kind of growth. For example, some factories create massive wealth, but they emit harmful gases and discharge waste water, posing a threat to people's health. People living in a polluted city would not have a real sense of happiness, even though they have more disposable income.

Moreover, in a country which is already rich, an important task is for the government to distribute the wealth fairly and build a society with equity and justice. Without a mechanism to ensure fair distribution, the increased wealth would not make citizens happier. Instead, the widening gap between the rich and poor may cause a series of social problems such as higher crime rate and more conflicts.

In conclusion, focusing on economic development does not necessarily result in citizens' greater satisfaction with their lives. Rich countries should also consider the environment and fairness when they pursue more wealth.

2021-10-9 雅思考试题目: Some people think it is more beneficial to play sports that are played in teams, e.g. football. Some people think individuals sports e.g. tennis and swimming are better.

Discuss both views and give your own opinion.

Some sports activities such as football and baseball need to be played by a group of people and it is claimed that players can benefit more from these than from individual sports. In fact, both have their advantages and it is hard to say which kind of activity is more beneficial.

All group sports emphasize cooperation of participants. For example, in a football game, all players need to work closely and only with every member's effort combined, can the team defeat its rival and win the game. In this process, participants learn how to cooperate with others and thus develop team spirit. This can benefit people in their work, as cooperation is the key to success in many complicated tasks. Besides, in team sports, people have the opportunity to enlarge their social circles and improve their social skills. These are highly valued in the modern society, giving people wider connections and more access to information.

However, it is argued that the role of group sports is overstated and individual sports are better. Participating in team sports in which cooperation is emphasized may lead to some players' dependence on others and impede individuals' personal development. Instead, such sports as playing tennis and swimming require players to hone their skills alone and keep in mind that they can only rely on themselves to win the game. In these sports, players can better focus on what they are doing, without distraction from others. They can learn skills and qualities that are more valuable for their future development.

In my opinion, people can benefit largely from group sports, but individual sports also teach people how to succeed without others' support.

2021-10-23 写作考题: Some people believe that employers should not be concerned about the way their employees dress, but they should be concerned about the quality of work. To what extent you agree or disagree?

A certain dress code is required for employees in many companies, but some people believe that employers should care about how employees perform rather than how they dress at work. In my opinion, whether there should be rules for employees' dressing depends on their positions and careers.

Undoubtedly, the top priority that employers should consider is staff's work performance, which seems to be irrelevant to their dressing styles. In some occupations such as programmers, accountants and machine operators, what they wear does not affect the quality of their work, as long as they can finish the task on time and up to the standard. A good example is that some technology companies allow employees to dress casually or wear whatever clothes they want. This policy creates an informal, fun and creative environment, in which employees can bring their initiatives into full play.

However, there are some work situations where staff's dress may influence the image of the company and the performance of employees. For some professionals such as nurses and flight attendants, the strict dress code can foster professionalism. 2021-11-6 雅思写作考题: Many people use social media every day to get in touch with others and news events. Do you think the advantages of this outweigh the disadvantages?

Social media has become an integral part of the lives of most people, making it convenient for them to connect with others and know the news. This trend brings many benefits, although there are some problems that should be noted.

Social media provides a great platform to stay in touch with other people. By viewing others' Facebook and Twitter, people can keep up to date with the lives of their friends, families and co-workers, whereas before the advent of social media, those who lived in different cities easily lost contact. For business people, social media is a great tool that helps them to find new customers and promote their products.

Social media is also an important source of news, more timely and flexible than traditional forms of media. Those who witness the news event can post it online immediately and readers have easy access to the latest news via their mobile phones. In addition to that, web users can also join the discussion about the news event by making their comments to follow the post. Social media gives readers more opportunities to express their opinions and share their ideas, with much greater degree of participation and interaction.

However, the negative effects associated with social media have also drawn people's attention. Unlike newspapers and TV, social media does not have rigorous censorship. The result is that, in some cases, the news turns out to be fake after it spreads widely on the web. As for social life, some people have difficulty in face-to-face communication since they get used to online socializing. Their social skills decline rather than improve in real life.

Overall, social media has more advantages than disadvantages, but we should also be aware of its problems and try to address these problems.
