1) Do you still keep in touch with your friends from childhood? Why or why not?

2) How important is childhood friendship to children?

- 属于类型:

常见问法 7 (请说明 XX 的重要性)

- 参考回答:

Can I just say very important? Yeah, because that's the first word popping into my head. For me, it's kind of a given that friends from our childhood are priceless.

Of course, some people might disagree; they might think it's not necessary to make friends for children during their childhood, and they might think it's because kids will grow up and may move to other countries. Most of them will lose their childhood friendship due to distance and different pursuits.

This may sound reasonable, but I still think it's vital to have childhood friendships.

First of all, I guess it's indispensable for every individual. Take me as an example, I think I'm lucky because I had a close childhood friend. We have maintained this friendship for over 15 years. Although because of the Covid, we didn't fly to each other's birthday party the two recent years, we still gave our wishes through video calls.

Also, I think there will also be some societal benefits. Just imagine, if you move to a strange place, feeling lonely, and find no one to talk with, then your old friend will always be there.

So, to sum up, from the two perspectives, both individual and societal, I think it is important that children should make friends during their childhood.

2) What are the advantages and disadvantages of cultural diversity?

- 属于类型：

常见问法 1 (请罗列出 XX)

- 参考回答：

Oh, yeah, it is true that there are pros and cons of cultural diversity.

I guess this issue is kind of complicated; if I have to create different categories for that, it might be kind of challenging.

But based on what I have seen around me, and the situation in China, I guess I can list two of them.

Firstly, cultural diversity is beneficial in many aspects. In China, there are 56 ethnic groups. The Han people are the largest ethnic group. There are also minority ethnic groups like Miao, Zhuang, and Korean. Due to the diverse groups, we can enjoy different kinds of traditional food; we can come across various dialects, and they are precious linguistic heritages.

Secondly, there may be some negative aspects of cultural diversity. Sometimes, it's hard to understand dialects, and people from different groups need to talk in Standard Mandarin. In addition, it's inevitable that some bias exists between groups due to different lifestyles.

I know the reality is actually far more complicated, but as far as I know, these two types may be two good examples.

常见问法 2 (请说出 XX 对于不同人群的区别)

- 参考回答:

Indeed, I think things are totally different for people of different genders.

Since I myself am a woman, I will first talk about someone like me, what the situation is about them.

For young women, I guess it's like they have better fashion sense. Women are passionate about fashion trends. They are into shopping, buying new clothes, shoes, and bags. They have accumulated experience and are good at coordinating fashionable outfits.

But when it comes to someone who is male, things might be different. I am not pretty sure, but if I am allowed to imagine here, I'd like to say that maybe they are less interested in fashion. It's obvious that there are fewer clothing styles, patterns, and colors for males. They just don't need as many choices as females.

This is actually what I think about this issue. While I am sure about the situation for someone like me, namely, young women, it's hard to say that the same situation applies to men as well.

I guess this issue is kind of complicated; if I have to create different categories for that, it might be kind of challenging.

But based on what I have seen around me, and the situation in China, I guess I can list two of them.

Firstly, due to the Covid-19, people may be quarantined at home for several weeks, so people have spare time to plant some vegetables on their balconies. They can learn lessons from online platforms such as Tiktok, and Youtube. After several days, they can enjoy cheap and fresh vegetables!

Secondly, population aging is a universal trend, and there are a lot of old people living in their houses with yards, big or small. Growing vegetables is a good way to enrich their lives. They can also share their harvest with their neighbors.

Firstly, parents may help their kids to have new ideas and strong feelings of enthusiasm. It's because children can be touched by some things their parents usually do. For example, if a father is a great soccer player and spends a lot of time accompanying their kids to play soccer, it's more likely that the children could feel the charm of soccer and love it. That is to say, they fall in love with soccer because they have a lot of happy times playing soccer with their father.

Secondly, teachers can also inspire children to do interesting things. It's because children can learn different courses from different teachers. Kids are exposed to a wide range of disciplines at school. Hence, they have chances to find their beloved subjects and interesting points. It's possible that some students feel mathematics attractive, while some find langue learning exciting.

To sum up, there are a lot of reasons behind this phenomenon, but I guess I just mentioned the most important two or three reasons.

It is true that things like this may have various impacts.

If we are going to divide these impacts into positive and negative ones, I would say that the benefits are more than the negative influence.

Firstly, I think it's beneficial because it can help parents to save a lot of money by letting kids watch animal videos. Parents don't have to pay various fees like toll rates, tickets, and service tips. Also, if kids are attracted to some toys in the souvenir shop, they are likely to ask or cry for them. It's a big expense sometimes.

Also, I guess we should also notice that some excellent moments in videos can't be easily spotted in zoos, like sleeping baby pandas, fighting lions, and swimming polar bears.

On the other hand, there might be some drawbacks as well. The first that comes to my mind is that parents are easily exhausted playing with their kids in the zoo. Kids are very energetic and never stop. Also, they lack self-protection awareness in public.

Therefore, parents need to keep alert and protect them all the way. In the end, they all get tired out.

Also, a lot of people say that there will be potential dangers for kids in a zoo. For example, if kids feed a hungry monkey, they may be attacked by it, and I agree.

So, to sum up, it has both positive and negative aspects.

I guess no one will deny that it's important that the standard of success is hard to define. But if we are going to come up with some specific proposals, I think it requires more analysis.

I guess perhaps we need to figure out what the current problem is, and then we can have a solution.

For example, it's obvious that some people argue for a large amount of money as a sign of success, while some maintain success comes from happiness, and the reason behind it, I guess, is that people have diverse criteria for success.

So, now we know the cause, then we can have a solution. Firstly, it is important that it feels more successful sitting in a huge space. Some people would like to earn more money and believe that wealth can lead to more comfortable and successful lives, like buying a big house instead of renting a small apartment. Also, more money can solve some problems. For example, at Disneyland, if there are a lot of people, you have to wait for a long time before you could play. However, you can spend extra money to buy a FASTPASS to save time and get the most out of your trip. That is to say, your trip is more successful if you are free to pay more money.

Also, maybe it is vital that people can also feel successful if they are happy but not wealthy. For example, some people feel happy and successful living in a small apartment. It's because they are closer to their family members, and have more chances to interact with each other. In plus, parents with less ambition about work and money have more spare time playing with their kids, and the small rooms are full of laughter.

It is true that things like this may have various impacts.

If we are going to divide these impacts into positive and negative ones, I would say that the benefits are more than the negative influence.

Firstly, I think it's beneficial because sharing is a good way to make friends and show love. When a kid shares his/her candies with others, he/she could make friends. Sometimes, this pure friendship could last for a whole life.

Also, I guess we should also notice that, mostly, kids who love sharing are grateful and happy. As a proverb goes: a little fragrance always clings to the hand that gives the roses.

On the other hand, there might be some drawbacks as well. The first that comes to my mind is that kids may fail to learn to refuse others and feel submissive. They may put the needs and wants of others before their own. This is harmful to their future development.

But if we are going to come up with some specific proposals, I think it requires more analysis.

I guess perhaps we need to figure out what the current problem is, and then we can have a solution.

For example, it's obvious that two people from different countries may argue about...let me think...a hand gesture such as an OK sign, and the reason behind it, I guess, is that the same hand gesture may have opposite meanings within different cultures.

So, now we know the cause, then we can have a solution. Firstly, it is important that the two people should take a deep breath and pause for a while. Next, they can explain the meaning behind the OK sign. In most of the world, the OK sign means great; while in some countries like Brazil, it's rude.

Also, maybe it is vital that people should try to put themselves in the other person's shoes and keep an open mind.

I guess no one will deny that it's important that people should remember things they are obliged to do.

But if we are going to come up with some specific proposals, I think it requires more analysis.

I guess perhaps we need to figure out what the current problem is, and then we can have a solution.

For example, it's obvious that it's almost impossible for human beings to remember all the things they have to do without reminders and the reason behind it, I guess, is that the capacity of people's instant memory is limited. Also, most people can only focus on one thing within a period of time, and can't spare focus for other things.

So, now we know the cause, then we can have a solution. Firstly, it is important that we take advantage of diverse devices to manage our busy time. For example, we can make schedules with the help of calendars. We can also write down a to-do list with our pencils on paper.

Also, maybe it is vital that we should erase things we have finished on our devices so that we can be less pressured and more confident to continue the remaining tasks.

1) Why do people rarely use cash now?

- 属于类型:

常见问法 5 (请给出某件事情的原因)

- 参考回答:

Why do people seldom use cash now? let me think……it is true that people are reluctant to pay in cash, and they don't bring much cash in their daily lives.

But if we are going to delve into the reasons behind it, I guess some factors might be responsible.

Firstly, I guess it has something to do with the society as a whole. I mean, a lot of people nowadays actually pay their bills through their smartphone applications like Google pay, or Alipay, so other people might be just following their lead, or, how to say, to comply with the standard, or, you know, the Herd Behavior Effect.

But, of course, I guess it also has something to do with individual preferences. I mean, different people have different views, different values, so it's very common that some people would rather pay in cash, and they think that cash is more trustworthy.

Finally, if we are looking for more reasons, I guess it may have something to do with the technology, I guess? But I am not sure since there are a lot of mobile payment services pursuing fast and convenient payment methods, though there may be potential risks of leaking people's personal information.

To sum up, there are a lot of reasons behind this phenomenon, but I guess I just mentioned the most important two or three reasons.

I guess no one will deny that it's important that we should decrease the use of plastic products.

But if we are going to come up with some specific proposals, I think it requires more analysis.

I guess perhaps we need to figure out what the current problem is, and then we can have a solution.

For example, it's obvious that plastic products like shopping bags and drink bottles are commonly used in our daily lives, and the reason behind it, I guess, is that those products are cheap, disposable, and convenient.

So, now we know the cause, then we can have a solution. Firstly, it is important that the stores could take measures to encourage customers to make use of environmentally friendly bags like cloth bags or paper bags. They are all degradable. For example, the stores could offer cloth bags, and give customers refunds if they return those bags or keep using them for the following shopping.

Also, maybe it is vital that people learn to sort the plastic products out of other trash and throw them into the recycle dustbins. Plus, the city government or community service clients should aid in managing recycling drop-off locations.

常见问法 3 (过去 vs 现在 vs 未来)

- 参考回答:

Actually, I really gave some thought to questions like this.

I kind of have the feeling that things might be different in the past, in the current way, and in the future as well.

Firstly, nowadays. Because it's the current situation, I know it very well. It's like people are always in a rush; they run to take the morning subway to work, they hurry to finish their meals and even do flash marriage. Frequently, you can hear people saying "I'll be late!", or "I'm running out of time!". It seems that they don't have time to be patient. It's a luxury for them to slow down the pace and be patient.

Secondly, if I look back, like, in the past 20 years I have been through, it was like people were more patient. For example, my classmates were patient to help me solve my math problems.

But if we are talking about something in a more remote past, I am not sure, but I have heard from my family members. My mother actually said it's good for your digestion and nutrient absorption if you eat slowly and chew fully.

Finally, if I am to predict about the future, I am not sure, but I have the feeling that people will be busier along with the high pace of tech development.

Ok, I think that's all for my opinions.

- 属于类型:

常见问法 1 (请罗列出 XX)

- 参考回答:

Oh, yeah, it is true that there are some possible actions customers could do if they find something wrong with the products.

I guess this issue is kind of complicated; if I have to create different categories for that, it might be kind of challenging.

But based on what I have seen around me, and the situation in China, I guess I can list two of them.

Firstly, they should preserve evidence like pictures or videos of the products to demonstrate the problem. Meanwhile, the product tags should also be kept complete. If you want to argue for something, evidence is indispensable.

Secondly, they could contact the customer service agent, explain the problems of the products, and upload evidence. If the agent apologizes and makes up for the loss, that's fine. However, if the agent is impolite, we should definitely fight back.

I know the reality is actually far more complicated, but as far as I know, these two types may be two good examples.
